“May Butter” definition found!
The June 1996 issue of the AFH contained a question by member Dorothy L. Miller of Albuquerque, NM, on the definition of “May butter”. Member Lynne Scott-Drennan of Folsom, CA, supplied her with the following answer from her Oxford English Dictionary from 1615: “If during the month of May before you salt your butter, you save a lumpe thereof and put it into a vessels and so set it in the sunne the space of that month, you shall find it exceeding medicinable for wounds.”

Mrs. Miller’s letter stated further: “During the Regulator-Moderator War in Shelby County, TX, a battle erupted in the cornfield of George Butler. His wife Elizabeth treated the wounds with May butter and was upset because she used it all and had none left for the rest of the year.”

World Family Tree Project

The World Tree Project is an ongoing effort by Broderbund Software to collect and compile family trees from family history enthusiasts all over the world. The project began over a year ago when Broderbund Software, Inc., invited Family Tree Maker customers to submit their family trees to be placed on CD-ROM. At least three CDs have already been issued, helping customers find information about their ancestors. The project has a World Family Tree Submitter Information Service to locate the submitters of the family information.

To receive information on this project, contact Gina Gan, Assistant Product Manager, Broderbund Software, Inc., 39500 Stevenson Place, Suite 204, Fremont, CA 94539-3103, Internet gina_han@broder.com; or visit the www.familytreemaker.com web site.

Ceremony Honors Confederate Soldiers

From the Texarkana Gazette, June 3, 1996, by Greg Bischof

Submitted by Ed and Betty Perzer, 219 Congress, Hot Springs, AR 71901

Rondo, Ark.—Some unknown Confederate soldiers who have remained buried and unidentified in Rondo Cemetery for 134 years, were named Sunday.

Twenty four of about 85 unknown Confederate soldiers were named during a historical marker dedication ceremony held by the Van Zandt County (Texas) Historical Commission at the cemetery.

All of the soldiers belonged to the 19th Texas Volunteer Infantry Regiment.

During the ceremony, Van Zandt County Historical Commission Chairman Donald Plemmons cited the history of the regiment, showing who some of the soldiers were, where they were from, why they were there, where they were going and what killed them.

Plemmons said finding the 24 names took years of researching Civil War-era letters, diaries and archives.

We collected these names slowly through the years," he said. "It took a lot of travel and a lot of research."

Historical records show that in 1862 the black measles killed most of the Confederate troops buried five to a grave in 17 graves at Rondo.

"The troops may have died from what is now called paratyphoid fever, which comes from drinking contaminated water," Plemmons said.

"Contamination washed into the spring where the men got most of their drinking water," he said.

The Confederate soldiers buried at Rondo were all from 13 counties in East Texas. The troops were en route to Camp Nelson near Little Rock to intercept Union forces.

"They had to sleep in the rain and in the snow," Plemmons said. "Some of them even had to sleep standing up to keep from freezing."

Records show that the Confederates were from such Texas towns as Jefferson, Coffeeville, San Augustine, Dairiefield and Minden.

"Even though they did not die in battle, they died for their country," said the commission's secretary-treasurer, Annette Plemmons.

Besides the tribute, the ceremony featured flag demonstrations, a 21-gun salute by area Confederate Army re-enactors and an artillery demonstration during the playing of "Taps." It also included a uniformed color guard and members of the United Daughters of the Confederacy dressed in Civil War era out-fits.

"It really was not a Civil War," said Lynda Estes, president of the Confederate Rose Chapter of the UDC. "It was the War Between the States because civil means a war within a nation and the South broke off as a separate nation."

During the war, the Arkansas Capitol relocated to Rondo for three months before being moved to Washington, Ark. The capital was moved from Little Rock because of the threat of capture by Union forces from Missouri.

[NOTE: The Capitol was first moved to Hot Springs during this period]

Other members of the 19th were buried in Arkansas towns of Washington, Arkadelphia, Little Rock and Pine Bluff. The unit engaged Union forces on several battle fronts before its officers surrendered the unit in Galveston 101 years ago Sunday.

The program for the event contained a sheet listing the identified soldiers: name, rank, enlistment place/date, death date, place of death, information shown here as line items:

This society was founded in the 160th year from the date in history of the fall of The Alamo and the death of its heroic defenders.

The purposes of the corporation are patriotism and promoting a better awareness of the valor of the Texas Heros of The Alamo and their unique place in Texas history.

Membership is open to all descendants of those who fought for Texas Independence and who died at The Alamo in its historic defence.

The society is honored to have Timothy Field Beard, one of the most noted genealogists in the United States, as its official genealogist.

All initial inquiries as to membership should be directed to:

Although the laws of Arkansas Territory provided for divorces to be granted by the courts, few people applied to the legislature for divorces at most of the sessions. Genealogists rarely look for legislative divorces, because the search is tedious and usually is not productive, since the odds are against finding reference to a specific family.

The sources are the Journals of the House of Representatives and the Legislative Council for identification of people asking for divorces, and the Acts of the session for those petitions that were granted. These were first published in the Little Rock newspaper that had the public printing contract, and the newspaper version is easier to locate and use than the pamphlet version. The information given is skimpy, not always including the wife's maiden name, and usually not indicating the couple's place of residence, much less the grounds for divorce.

The Journals of this session were never published in pamphlet form, and only the House Journal was published in the Arkansas Gazette. The Acts included no divorces, but the House Journal shows that two petitions were presented:

Mason Vanc and Jane Vanc, his wife, praying for a divorce.

Maria Norvell, praying for a divorce from James Norvell.

With a divorce pending in Superior Court, Maria Norvell advertised to notify her non-resident husband in the Gazette of July 14, 1821.

This was the first session held in Little Rock, and the Gazette had not yet moved to the new seat of government from Arkansas Post; the Journals were never published in either form, so there is no record of submitted petitions. The Acts included no divorces.

In the two divorces granted in this session, the wife's married name is shown as an alias instead of her maiden name, evidently a mistake of the author of the bills. They were:

The Journals also show a petition by John Gibson for a divorce from Milly D. Gibson, but it was rejected on Oct. 27. Gibson inserted a notice in the Gazette of Oct. 23, denying gossip in circulation pertaining to his marriage and separation from his wife.

Four petitions were presented, and both houses dealt with them hastily, dispensing with the rules repeatedly to have all three required readings of the bills on the spot and passing them immediately. But Governor George Izard refused to approve any divorce acts and made it clear that he would take the same position in the future. The thwarted divorces were:

Esther Wilson, alias Esther Fowler, and Thomas Wilson.

Joseph A. Huber and Sarah Huber, alias Sarah Lindsey.

Joseph Weston and Polly Weston, alias Polly Love.

Abraham Darden and Harriet Dardenne. (Probably this was Abraham and Harriet Dardenne of Richland Township, Arkansas County.)

The last two passed both houses. The Huber bill passed the House and was read once in the Legislative Council, when a second petition from Joseph Huber was presented, "praying that the bill of divorce may not pass, as the grounds upon which he founded his first petition were entirely removed." (Gazette, Oct. 25, 1825.) But the reconciliation was short-lived. He had asked for the divorce because his wife declined to live with him, but she promised she would if he would revoke his petition. He advertised in the Gazette of Nov. 1, 1825 that she was "the mother of a spurious child, to whom I be the reputed father, and said she had obstinately refused to fulfill her promises to live with him. Consequently he warned the public not to deal with her in his name, and said he would seek the divorce in the Circuit Court of Pulaski County. But it remained for Sarah to take that step in January of 1827, when she advertised that Huber was not a resident of Arkansas Territory. About the same time, the Gazette published a letter from Dr. Joseph A. Huber, surgeon of the 9th Regiment of Mexican Dragoons, concerning the revolution in Texas. This couple's marriage notice in the Gazette, Aug. 2, 1825, identifies them as Dr. Joseph A. Huber, formerly of Davidsonville, and Sarah, daughter of Caleb Lindsey, who married July 28, 1825 at Fourche de Thomas, Lawrence County.

Only one divorce petition came before the legislature, probably because Izard was still governor. Actually it involved two petitions both submitted by Mathias Lock of Lawrence County. One resulted in a House bill entitled "An act to legitimize the children and legalize the marriage of Mathias Mock," and the other was Mock's petition for a divorce of Margaret Hill from her husband, Israel M. Hill, introduced in the Council. The House then amended its bill to be a bill for divorce, which passed both houses and was approved by the governor on Oct. 28, 1827. (Gazette, Oct. 30 and Dec. 28, 1827.)

1828

Izard died in 1828, and the new governor, John Pope, wasn't squeamish about approving divorce acts, so no petitions were rejected. Seven divorces were granted:

Franklin Wharton and Mary Jane Wharton, alias Mary Jane Bailor. Approved Nov. 10, 1829. (Acts, p. 89; Gazette, Dec. 23, 1829.)

Abner Lea and Charity Lea, alias Charity Lewis of Hempstead County. Approved Nov. 13, 1829. (Acts, p. 91; Gazette, Dec. 23, 1829.)

1831

The Arkansas Advocate had the public printing contract, but ran out of paper. By permission of the governor and the territorial secretary, the Gazette published the Journals and Acts Pro Bono Publico. Later the Advocate published the Acts, and also the pamphlet version, but not the Journals.

This session received 21 divorce petitions, but only two were successful, and their divorces were granted in the same act, approved Nov. 3, 1831. (Acts, p. 52; Gazette, Dec. 14, 1831.) The two couples:

Beverly Stubblefield and Nancy W. Stubblefield, alias Nancy W. Clark, hereafter to be known as Nancy W. Jones.

Gideon Dunn and Hester Dunn, alias Hester Standford.

Divorce petitions in the House usually were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, which in this session expressed a determination not to report favorably on any petition if the laws in force could offer relief to the parties. The committee gave these two petitions "more than ordinary attention," and drew up a Bill for the divorces, presenting it to the House with an eloquent plea for passing it without amendment. The rhetoric was impressive, but gave no clue to the nature of the extraordinary nature of the two cases. The committee's spokesman said, "The facts that they are not and never can be relivable in the courts of justice, calls..."
strongly for the interposition of your Legislature. Your committee cannot believe that the passage of your bill will be a dangerous precedent, because it is not probable that any such cases will ever arise."

(House Journal for Oct. 27, 1831, p. 206.) Both houses passed the bill without amendment.

This suggests that the two divorces were related. Gideon Dunn had been convicted of manslaughter in the killing of his father-in-law, John Standford, and sentenced to one year in the Phillips County Jail. (Gazette, June 22, 1831.)

Near the end of the session, there were attempts to add the names of most of the people asking for divorces to a bill under consideration, many of which had not been introduced, but the bill was not passed. These were the unsuccessful petitioners:

James Tucker and Eoaah Tucker.
Lucretia Clark, alias Lucretia Gilbreath, and Jonathan Clark.
Alexander W. Sweeney and Susannah Sweeney.
George Stroop and Martha Stroop.
Loretta Piles, alias Loretta Elkins, and Overton Piles.
Nancy Tyler, alias Nancy Sailors, and Allen Tyler.
Mary Ann McSweeney; husband's name not stated.
Abraham S. Welty and Jemima Welty, alias Jemima Luster.
Abraham Smawley and Elizabeth Smawley. (Spelled Smalley in 1833.)
John Hays and Polly Hays.
Peter Englishby and Mary Englishby.
Ambrose Frier and Letitia Frier, alias Letitia English.
Joseph Fenton and Polly Fenton.
Thomas Griffin and Mary Griffin.
Bryant Ferrill and Mary D. Ferrill.
Robert Crump and Minerva Crump.

This session dealt with 21 petitions and granted 19 divorces, seven by separate acts and the rest lumped together in "An act to dissolve the bonds of matrimony between certain persons." Some of these had not been introduced, and evidently their cases were not individually discussed. The act was hotly debated, as some legislators felt that some petitions didn't present acceptable grounds for divorce and couldn't have succeeded in court.

One legislator opposed the Cole divorce because it involved ex parte testimony and he said it should go to court where both sides could be heard. Another knew the couple and thought the complaint was just. John Sinclair of Crawford County said the simple fact that neither party wanted out of the marriage was all he needed to know, and the reasons were nobody's business and the couple should not have to air such private matters in court or anywhere else.

The 1833 divorces granted individually were:

Elijah Caples and Melinda Caples, alias Melinda Smith, and she to be known by the name of Melinda Smith. Approved Nov. 8, 1833. (Gazette, Nov. 27, 1833.)

James Smith and Clara Smith, alias Clara Roundtree. Approved Nov. 11, 1833. (Gazette, Nov. 27, 1833.)

The Little Rock Times published the official Journal and Acts, and also the pamphlet version of the Acts. There was no pamphlet publication of the Journals. The Gazette published the Journals Pro Bono Publico, but published only the acts that were of interest to the general public. These five divorces were in the Acts:

Amos Cohee and Mary Cohee, alias Mary Simlock. Approved Oct. 27, 1835. (Acts, p. 22; Times, Dec. 14, 1835.)

Rachel Higginbottom, alias Rachel Tilly, and John H. Higginbottom. Approved Oct. 27, 1835 (Acts, p. 22; Times, Dec. 14, 1835.) In same act as the Cohee divorce.

Nancy A. Scott, late Nancy Dodge, and George W. Scott. Approved Nov. 2, 1833. (Acts, p. 67; Times, Jan. 11, 1836.)

As in the previous session, an omnibus divorce bill was introduced, but it was not passed and the couples included were not named in the bill's title. The Gazette's version of the Journals shows petitions from the couples listed below, and it is likely that these were included in the omnibus bill, and possibly others not otherwise mentioned. This is the last session of the Territorial General Assembly. Legislative divorces did not end with the beginning of state government, but the legislators became more and more resistant to them.
Two technological advances in our generation have made it possible for us to actually see the genes which determine our traits, and even to alter those traits. The electron microscope has made it possible for us to see particles thousands of times smaller than ever before. Advances in medical science have made it possible to identify, and to some extent, repair damaged parts of the genetic code which causes us to be ill, or susceptible to physical and mental disorders. The electron microscope was necessary to allow us to see genes, and huge strides in medical techniques were required to allow us to change them.

Farther into this article we will learn what is meant by gene and genetic. However, for the moment, let's just see an example of how a physical dangerous defect can be transmitted through the genes which we inherit from our parents. Let me tell you the story of "Royal Hemophilia."

There are about two dozen blood clotting factors in the normal human body. In the case of Queen Victoria of Britain (1819-1901) a mutation (significant and basic alteration in hereditary material) in Factor IX occurred in one of her parents. This meant that some of their descendants, including Victoria, would either have, or be carriers of, a disorder called hemophilia which causes even a slight wound to bleed profusely.

In the 5 generations since Victoria, 10 of her male descendants have had hemophilia.

Ironically, the British royal family has been spared, because her son, Edward VII, did not inherit the defective gene (allele.) Three of her nine children did inherit the gene and carried it into marriages which have affected many of the royal houses of Europe.

Hemophilia is sex-linked, i.e., it is carried by the X-chromosome. Females have only X chromosomes. For this reason, we are particularly interested in the females of suspect families. In Victoria's case, she had four daughters—Victoria, Alice, Helena and Beatrice. Alice and Beatrice both were carriers of hemophilia, and a son, Leopold, had the disorder.

Victoria, the daughter, married Frederick III of Germany. She was not a carrier. Descendants of the German royal family did not inherit the hemophilia.

Alice married the Duke of Hesse. From her, the Prussian royals did inherit it. One of the sons of Alice had the disorder and Irene, the daughter of Alice, was a carrier. Two of Irene's sons had hemophilia. Alexandra, the other daughter of Alice, was a carrier and became the Czarina of Russia, when she married Czar Nicholas II, passing the defect to the Russian ruling family. Alexis, her son, had the disorder. Of course, that strain of the trait died when the Russian royal house was murdered in 1917.

Helena was not a carrier.

Beatrice was a carrier, and she married Prince Henry of Hesse and passed the disorder to two of her sons, Maurice and Leopold. Their sister, Eugenie, who married Alfonso, King of Spain, also had the trait, and two of her sons developed it—Alfonso and Gonzalo.

From a parent of Queen Victoria, this trait is still being transmitted in Europe.

I. DEFINITIONS & VOCABULARY

Genetics is a technical subject, and like all technical subjects, has a vocabulary of its own. We need to learn some words which may be new, and their correct definitions or descriptions. We will not follow the dictionary and study our words alphabetically. It should be helpful if we will take related words in logical order, rather than words which are spelled similarly but are unrelated otherwise.

DNA—deoxyribose nucleic acid; makes up chromosomes
CHROMOSOMES-structures in cell nucleus; carrier of linearly arranged genes; each human receives 23 chromosomes from each parent for a total of 46.

GENE-unit of DNA located at a fixed identified location on a chromosome; determines trait or condition, such as eye color, hair color, ear size, baldness, etc.

Let us pause and sum up by getting a picture-a visual image of what we are talking about. Just visualize a chicken egg, like the one you recently had for breakfast. This egg represents a cell. We will let the yolk of the egg be the nucleus. In the nucleus of every human cell, there are 46 chromosomes. Arranged in rows, or lines, on these chromosomes, in fixed, assigned positions, there are thousands of genes. Each gene determines some trait, or condition, of the human body and its functioning.

Got the picture? 1 cell
46 chromosomes
1000s of genes

These genes are so numerous, in fact, that, as incredible as it seems, there are about 70 trillion (!) possible combinations of chromosomes that a child can inherit. No wonder no one in the world has a fingerprint precisely like yours.

GENETIC-having to do with genes or inheritance

ALLELE-a damaged or defective gene

CLINICAL GENETICS-study and prediction of probability of occurrence of traits from laws of genes

GENOGRAM-chart or diagram which illustrates inheritance of a trait or condition

GENE THERAPY-treating genetic disease by repairing or replacing damaged genes

CONGENITAL-existing from birth; not necessarily genetic

CARRIER-person whose cells have one copy of a recessive gene for a trait and who does not express the trait but can transmit it

RECESSIVE GENE-gene for a trait which will be expressed only in individual who inherits a copy of the gene from both mother and father; less powerful gene

DOMINANT GENE-gene which expresses trait in spite of simultaneous presence of gene for another form of that trait; more powerful gene CHROMOSOMAL ERRORS-abnormalities in number and/or structure of chromosomes caused by aging, radiation, viruses, possibly other causes; e.g., Down's syndrome is caused by an extra chromosome.

XX CHROMOSOME-female sex chromosome; some genetic disorders are sex-linked, or X-linked.

XY CHROMOSOME-male sex chromosome; determines sex of offspring. No man can ever justly fuss at his wife about the sex of a child. He did it!

SEX-LINKED-located only on the X chromosome, therefore passed on only by the mother; also called X-linked Color blindness is an example of a harmless sex-linked trait. The gene for color perception occurs only on the X chromosome. It is a recessive trait, so if a female has the faulty gene, she has another X chromosome which will normally have a dominant gene which will suppress the fault, and her vision will be normal. It is extremely rare that a female will be color blind.

On the other hand, suppose a male baby gets a color blindness gene from his mother. His X chromosome is color blind. He has no other X chromosome to suppress this one, so he will be color blind and about 8 per cent of males are color blind.

A far more serious example of a sex-linked disorder is hemophilia. This is really what we are talking about when we say someone is a "bleeder." The slightest open injury can cause such a person to bleed to death. It is the result of a recessive gene on the X chromosome. The female carries it and passes it to her offspring, but only the males have no other X chromosome to dominate the recessive flaw, so males have the disorder. It is extremely rare in females. In fact, if a female has the gene for hemophilia, she will normally die at menarche (the onset of menstruation.) She simply hemorrhages to death. A hemophiliac male can sometimes have his life extended by having his spleen surgically removed.

UMBILICAL LINEAGE—genealogy which traces the umbilical line (umbilicus = navel cord) i.e., lineage from mother, mother, mother, mother. In the light of what we have said about hemophilia, you can see why one might be concerned to study the mother-line.

TRAIT—quality or condition passed from one generation to another

II. WHY IS GENETICS IMPORTANT TO A GENEALOGIST?

It is no more important to a genealogist than it is to others, but a genealogist should be in a better position to benefit from its principles. A genealogist has access to family records for several generations, and has developed the expertise necessary to locate currently unknown information. Particularly, if a person knows early in life what his genetic heritage is, he may be able to make wiser choices as to having children, areas in which to live, occupations in which to engage, and a lifestyle to cultivate.

III. UNDERSTANDING MORE OF GENETICS WILL AVOID THE DANGERS OF "A LITTLE KNOWLEDGE"

Some traits which might be assumed to be inherited are actually the result of injury or disease. Knowing the basics of genetics will enable a person to be more careful about jumping to conclusions.

One lovely young married couple in another state were very reluctant to have children because the wife had been born with cleft palate and hare lip. When they understood that this is a recessive trait, they were reassured. To occur again, both the wife and the husband would have to be able to transmit the gene. There was no history of cleft palate in his family. Therefore, there was very little chance that they would produce a child with this deformity. In fact, many researchers consider cleft palate to be a congenital defect and not a genetic trait at all.

IV. IT NEEDS TO BE UNDERSTOOD THAT SOME "LETHAL GENE" DISORDERS ARE ETHNIC

Only Jewish infants are likely to have Tay-Sachs disease, a familial mental illness. This is a disorder which will not allow the afflicted person to live much beyond age twenty, and then only as an idiot. It is diagnosed by visualization of the retinas; they both have cherry red spots with gray borders in Tay-Sachs. There is a screening blood test for possible carriers, so that large populations can be tested. Carriers have low amounts of the enzyme hexoaminidase A. If a fetus lacks this enzyme at 14 weeks of gestation, it has the disease.

Sickleemia, or sickle cell anemia, is confined almost entirely to blacks. This is an incurable blood disorder, frequently fatal in children. The abnormally shaped cells of the blood of the patient makes the blood so "thick" it can cause headache, convulsions, and paralysis. In the acute stage, it produces a swollen, tender belly. If a person survives to 50 years or beyond, kidney disorders usually cause death. Again, there is a blood test for carriers. If hemoglobin S is present, the individual may be a carrier.

V. SOME OTHER HEREDITARY DISORDERS

Huntington's chorea (St Vitus' dance)—hereditary disease (rare); quick involuntary movement, speech disorders, mental degeneration; usually appears between age 30 and 45 and ends 15 years or so later in death or total incapacity. No cure; no treatment except tranquilizers.

cystic fibrosis—breathing is hampered by excessively thick sticky mucus in the lungs, with excessive sweating and saliva; recessive trait; both parents must be carriers.

hypertension—elevated blood pressure may be hereditary, but is greatly aggravated by improper diet and exposure to excessive stress.

diabetes mellitus—sex-linked and alternate-generational—it skips generations and swaps sexes. A diabetic parent is not considered a hazard to children, but to grandchildren of the opposite sex.
blindness—especially, retinitis pigmentosa—and some types of tumor which cause blindness. A lady who worked for five years in my office in the university in which I was teaching has a father who has been blind from about 30 years of age as a result of retinitis pigmentosa (RP). Now, her son who is about age 28 has been told he will be blind by age 35. He inherited RP.

In another case, a blind woman who graduated from the same university moved to Scotland, married an Irishman, and had a child who became blind at about age 3 and died at age 4. The woman's mother is blind also. A little investigation revealed that the grandmother had a tumor on the optic nerve surgically removed when she became blind in early childhood. The daughter then had the tumor and became blind early in life, and her child had the tumor and it was fatal.

VI. WHAT GENETIC ENGINEERING MAY ACCOMPLISH

Normally, a destructive trait is progressive and irreversible. That is, since it is in one's very makeup, it cannot be cured. And, with time, it will get worse. But, we should not despair. There may be help on the horizon. Two years ago, a thirty year old female was discovered to have familial hypercholesterolemia. The cholesterol in her blood was very high, and it was a family trait. It seemed that her life might be shortened.

However, genetic engineers were able to locate the gene which caused the disorder, remove it, and replace it with a normal gene. Now her cholesterol level is in the desirable range. Who knows what may be possible, if we will just keep our heads and experiment very cautiously?

Wouldn't it be great if we could cure mental illness, such as schizophrenia or depression, by replacing a faulty gene?

Disorders of aging, Alzheimer's syndrome and Parkinson's disease are currently being investigated for genetic treatment. Those of us who have had loved ones with these traits know the torture they can bring.

VII. WHY? AND HOW?

Most genealogical researchers who have become interested in this field did so in order to determine the probability of their inheriting cancer. This is especially true of breast, colon, or prostate cancer. We may be able to greatly reduce lung cancer by changing our attitude toward tobacco. Colon cancer can be reduced by better dietary habits. Prostate cancer seems to be an affliction of advanced age. If a man lives to be 90 years old, there is about a 90 per cent chance that he will have prostate cancer. That leaves breast cancer.

Women have studied their mothers, sisters and aunts for a great while, to determine if they themselves had an increased probability of having breast cancer. We know now that we must also study their fathers, grandfathers and uncles. A male is most unlikely to have breast cancer (it does happen) but he may be a carrier. If the mother does not have cancer and the daughters do, it is likely the father who passed the gene to the daughters. That makes a Family Health History and a Genogram very important.

VIII. A STANDARD FORMAT FOR GENOGRAMS

The National Genealogical Society has been interested for five or more years in genetic transmission of physical disease traits. There have been a few lectures on the subject here and there. But, just last month, an entire issue of the National Genealogical Society Quarterly was devoted to the subject. It is entitled, Your Family's Health: An Introduction. Among the things it does is teach the standard format for a Genogram, or graphic health study for a family.

The entire process of gathering the information and recording it is explained briefly, but sources of more information are listed. I have listed a few of those for you at the end of this article. Some of these sources are college textbooks, but some are very readable books for the ordinary reader. You may not want to buy the books, but you can borrow them through your library by Interlibrary Loan. Postage is the only cost involved and often that is not charged.

Naturally, in this age of electronics, there is already computer software programs available which can be purchased to draw your Genograms for you. You still have to contact the people, interview them, and record the information; but if you will pass that along to your handy-dandy electronic friend, it can draw the picture correctly and show... you where to plug in the information. It will then adjust the picture for you and encourage you to analyze and apply the results.

IX. TO LEARN MORE ABOUT GENETIC TRANSMISSION OF DISEASE

Obtain some, or all, of the following:

Anne J. Krush and Kathleen A. Evans, Family Studies in Genetic Disorders, Springfield, IL: Charles C. Thomas, 1984 (currently out-of-print.) Directed toward social workers and medical personnel, but useful to others, this work points out indications for a family study, how to prepare for the study, and how to record and analyze the results of the study.

For genealogists, clinicians and researchers. Produces genograms and databases to record vital statistics, health information and critical events.

There is a lot more available. These are selected as bearing directly upon the practical side of the genealogist's work. For a much more complete listing, see National Genealogical Society Quarterly, Special Issue, Your Family's Health History, An Introduction, Vol. 82, No. 2, June 1994. Dallas County, Arkansas
County Court Records, Book "B"
April term 1863

Submitted by Lynda Suffridge, 3801 Caraway Ct.,
North Little Rock, AR 72116

The following material is an index, by soldier's name, to the families found in the "List of Families of Indigent Soldiers" in the April 1863 term of the County Court Records (Book "B"). In the court records, all members of the soldier's family and their age and relationship to him is given. Also listed is his home county (not in all cases Dallas County), his regiment, and if he is "in service" or "dead". A copy of the listing for a particular soldier may be obtained from the Arkansas History Commission, One Capitol Mall, Little Rock, AR 72201.

The Keys of Southern Arkansas

By Marcus M. Key, Weems, VA; Gerald W. Key, San Antonio, TX, and Joe W. Key, Sparkman, AR

Westward, westward, ever westward—the drive for new land continued long after the post-Revolutionary War period. In the 1840s and 1850s, the greatest land bargains were in the State of Arkansas, which began to give land to encourage migration soon after it became a State in 1836. Under the Arkansas Donation Law of 1840, settlers could obtain tax-forfeited lands in return for payment of future taxes. The head of a family could get one quarter section for himself, and one quarter section for each child. The law was amended in 1850 to permit a family as many 160-acre plots as there were members of the immediate family, regardless of age or sex. In 1850, Congress began confirming millions of acres of "swamp and overflow" land to the State for reclamation, much of it not in any way swampy or subject to overflow.[1]

Dallas Co., located in south-central Arkansas, was organized in 1845 from portions of Clark and Bradley Cos. Situated on the Southern Coastal Plain, it was an unusually fertile and arable area and was soon settled by planters from Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, and the Carolinas. By 1860, Dallas Co. was one of the most populous counties in the State, with population centers at Tulip, Princeton, and Holly Springs—see detail from Colton’s Map of Arkansas, 1855 (Fig. 1).[2]

The Keys who settled in Dallas Co. beginning in 1849 were caught up in the tide of western migration and represented the removal of a large group from Georgia—Thomas and Sarah (Jones) Key of Butts Co., Ga., and most of their children and grandchildren. Thomas Key was the son of Joseph and Judith (Watts) Key, who had moved from Bedford Co., Va., to Wilkes Co., Ga., shortly after the Revolution.[3] Thomas was born in Greene Co., Ga., Thomas was born in Greene Co., Ga.,[4] June 12, 1793.[5] Much of the information about his early years in Georgia comes from a biographical sketch of his son Dr. Abraham A. Key, of Clark Co., Ark.:

While a young man he learned the millwright’s trade, at which he worked until he came to Arkansas, where he turned his attention to farming, and accumulated a great deal of property before his death. He was a brother of Caleb Key, the father of Bishop Key, and was of English descent. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and the exposure which he underwent was so severe as to incapacitate him for farming, hence he turned his attention to the millwright’s trade. Both he and his wife were members of the Methodist Church, in which they took an active part, he serving in an official capacity. Socially he was a Mason, and politically a Whig.[6]

Thomas Key’s service in the War of 1812 was as a corporal in Jenkins’ Regiment of the Georgia Militia (Fig. 2).[7] His service was also indicated by his designation as a soldier for his drawing in the 1827 Land Lottery in Georgia.[8]

While working as a millwright in Georgia, Thomas developed a method for improving the action of waterwheels and was able to get a U. S. Patent No. 4498X) for his invention. The patent was issued July 18, 1826, for an "Invention in the mode of letting water on water wheels." [10] Unfortunately, the U. S. Patent Office burned in 1836, and the drawing and details of his patent were destroyed. In 1830, Thomas sold to James Cook of Blount Co., Tenn., for $600, the right to make and market his water-wheel improvement in the State of New York for a term of 14 years from the date of the patent.[11]

Thomas Key lived for many years in Jasper Co., Ga., where he owned 286 acres [12] and up to eight slaves.[13] He was a fortunate drawer in the Georgia Land Lotteries of 1821 (Houston Co.)[14] and 1837[8], and later bought land in the 1st and 7th districts of Henry Co.[15] The 1st District fell in Butts Co. In 1825, and it was here that Thomas Key moved in the early 1840s. His homestead was located in the neck between Tussahaw Creek and the Ocmulgee River, not far from Key’s Ferry and Key’s Church. Keys Ferry was chartered by Major Tandy Watts Key, Thomas’ older brother, in 1823.[16]
Key's Church was constructed on land donated by Thomas and Sarah Key in 1828.[17]

Thomas Key and two of his sons (A. A. and Richard C.) in nearby dwellings were enumerated in the 1850 Census in Tulip Township, Dallas Co., Ark.[18] His earliest land record was in 1851, when he was taxed for one quarter section and four slaves.[19] Eventually he acquired a total of 800 acres and owned 13 slaves,[20] which placed him in the "small planter" category.[21] Major crops in Dallas County at that time were cotton and corn.

Thomas Key died in Holly Springs, Dallas Co., Ark., Mar. 15, 1857,[4] a few months short of his 64th birthday. His headstone in the Old Holly Springs Cemetery (fig.3) contains the following epitaph, now barely legible:

When this you see remember me,
Farewell till we meet above.

Recently a War of 1812 Veteran's marker was placed on his grave by Key family descendants.[22]

Thomas Key's will, written a month before he died, named three of his sons as executors and includes a special bequest for the Methodist Missionary Society.[23] Sarah Key was living in Holly Springs at the time of the 1880 Census,[24] and at that time owned a considerable amount of land and 16 slaves—the third largest slave owner in Holly Springs Township of Dallas Co.[25] She died in Holly Springs in 1868[6] and was buried there,[26] probably next to her husband, but there is no grave marker for her.

All of Thomas and Sarah Key's children, except James Barton, eventually settled in Arkansas.[9] Their seven sons and three daughters were as follows:

(1) Joseph Lawrence Key, b. Sep. 22, 1812, m. Elizabeth Dawson Delamar.[27]
(2) Thomas Asberry Key, b. Nov. 26, 1813, m. Elizabeth (Eliza) Virginia Hardman.[28]
(3) Demaris W. Key, b. Mar. 14, 1815, m. Benjamin J. Hardman.[29]
(4) James Barton Key, b. Feb. 8, 1818, m. (1) Harriet (Hattie) L. Mann, and (2) Nancy Catherine (Callie) Dawson.[30]
(5) Richard Childress Key, b. May 15, 1820, m. Mariah Smith.[31]
(7) Abraham Arnold Key, b. Sep. 16 (6 per obituary and headstone[33]), 1825 m. (1) Margaret D. Smith and (2) Martha A. Huff;[5]
(8) Sarah R. Key, b. c1827, m. Albritton Ward.[34]
(9) Tandy Watts Key, b. c1839, m. Harriett Elizabeth Baker.[35] and
(10) Wesley F. B. C. Key, b. 1833, m. Sarah Jane Riley.[36]

Four of Thomas Key's sons (Thomas, Richard, Abraham and Wesley) became physicians, and one, Wesley F. B.C., practiced in Dallas Co. before the War. Richard C. Key was Holly Springs' first postmaster; Abraham A. Key was the second.[37] Thomas' oldest son, Joseph L. Key, contributed substantially to the commercial development of that part of the State by establishing several mills and factories in Holly Springs. According to a Bicentennial history of Holly Springs,[38] Joseph Key built the first gristmill there and then added a sawmill and a spinning jenny. He later built a wool carding factory. He also had a tannery and sold leather for making shoes. During the War, he made shoes for the Confederate Army. Joseph Key's house and mills are shown on the Confederate Map of Dallas Co., Ark., 1864 (Fig.4).[39]

Arkansas Queries

General guidelines for submitting queries:
1) Queries are limited to members only
2) Please submit no more than one query per calendar year
3) Keep the query to approximately fifty words
4) Neatness counts! If possible, type, double spaced. Otherwise print legibly, leave a space between each line
5) Capitalize Surnames

Remember the 4 Ws:
Who- Give complete names of interest
What- What do you want? Keep it short and to the point Where- LOCALITY IN ARKANSAS?
When- Give a time period

Since we always work with a large backlog of queries, we strive to print them in the order in which they are received. It may be several months, however, before your query appears. We do use all queries received in a calendar year before the end of that year. We continue to receive queries with no name and address included. If query gets separated from the envelope, we cannot use them. It simplifies the work of the all-volunteer staff of this publication if you send your queries with your membership fee, to the Arkansas Genealogical Society, PO Box 906, Hot Springs, AR 71902-0908.

The following are reviews and/or announcements of book acquisitions for the Arkansas Genealogical Society. The reviewed books are permanently housed at the Arkansas History Commission, or in the local History and Genealogy Room of the Little Rock Public Library. The Society expresses its appreciation to the authors and contributors.

Reserved copies of these books, please remember to say you saw the review or notice in this publication.

Lonoke County Marriage Index, 1921-1951, Vol. 2 compiled by Dwight Shubert, 8703 Oakhaven Dr., Sherwood, AR 72120; 372 pages; hardbound ($32.50 post paid) or softbound ($18.50 post paid). This volume covers the marriages recorded in Lonoke County, Arkansas, Marriage Books "V" through "42," from July, 1921 to December 31, 1951. The names and ages of both bride and groom as well as the date of the marriage and the book and page number where the marriage is recorded. The compiler has used a unique index in that brides and grooms are combined in one index, which this reviewer really liked because it listed all of one surname together regardless of their sex. Thus, each marriage is listed twice; once with the groom's name under the "Name" heading and the bride's name under the "Spouse" heading and vice versa and the bride's index is eliminated. (JBE)

Hispanic Surnames and Family History by Lyman D. Platt; published by Genealogical Publishing Co., Inc., 1001 N. Calvert St., Baltimore, Maryland 21202; 349 pages, soft cover; $19.95 plus $3.50 shipping and handling. This volume, for the most part, is a listing of the frequency of various Hispanic surnames in various places. Its value to the genealogist is in the bibliographic listings of Hispanic surname histories in both the United States and Latin American. According to the publisher, these listings include every Hispanic family history. Dr. Platt was able to locate in newspapers, magazines, historical compilations and monographs in twenty-five years of research. It is not indexed, but most of the listings are in alphabetical order. (JBE)

Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory (Oklahoma) Marriage Book C published by Sandra Tedford, 400 Sherry Lane, Farmersville, Texas 75442-1538; 98 pages; soft cover; no price information given. This volume includes the names of both the bride and groom, their ages and the name of the person performing the ceremony in a format that is page by page. There is an all inclusive, whole name index. It includes all or part of these modern day Oklahoma counties: Bryan, Carter, Coal, Garvin, Grady, Jefferson, Johnston, Love, McClain, Marshall, Murray, Pontotoc and Stephens and is evidently the second book of marriage records for this area prepared by the publisher. (JBE)

Weights, Money and Other Measures Used by Our Ancestors by Colin R. Chapman; published by Genealogical Publishing Company, Inc., 1001 N. Calvert St., Baltimore, Maryland 21202-3897; soft cover; 92 pages; graphs, charts, index; $15.00 plus $3.50 shipping and handling. If you are curious about words like "gills," "firkin," "hides" or "knight's fee" this slender volume is a treasure trove. It can be of great assistance in understanding exactly what terms mean in older wills or deeds. It is footnoted and well indexed and contains a bibliography. (JBE)

Mark Brewster of Hull, England and Allied Families in America by Marcus V. Brewster, P.O. Box 269, Manning, SC 29102; 336 pages; hardcover; acid-free paper; $32.00 postpaid. This family history and genealogy is that of a Brewster family which came from the same area and family as William Brewster who came to the New World on the Mayflower. It begins with Jonathan Brewster who was born in 1760 near Waltham Parish, Lincolnshire, England and includes the collateral British surnames of Atkey, Yelf, Dare and Fowler. Migrations to America begin in the 1830s into Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York and Illinois and include the surnames Potter, Hewitt, Carpenter, Hiscock and Swingley. Genealogical charts are included, as well as maps, illustrations, photographs and copies of records. This family history is well indexed and appears to be well documented. (JBE)

hardcover ($32.50 postage paid) or softcover, GBC bound ($18.50 postage paid); 372 pages. This volume contains the marriages recorded in marriage books "A" through "T," beginning on April 1, 1873 and ending on December 31, 1925. The compiler has indexed these marriages in a single list that includes both brides and grooms under the "Name" and "Spouse" columns. While every marriage is listed twice, once under the bride’s name and once under the groom’s name, it eliminated the necessity of a separate brides’ index and grouped all of the same surnames together, which this reviewer liked. The index includes the ages of both the bride and groom, the date of the marriage, the book and the page number where the marriage was recorded. This well printed book is easy to use. (JBE)

Index for Obituaries Appearing in The Eagle Democrat, Warren, Arkansas, Vol. Ill, 1950-1959, by Mary King Barrett; soft cover, $13.00, plus $2.00 postage and handling. This is the third volume of Mary’s indexes to this wonderful Bradley County newspaper. Her other volumes were 1930-1959 and 1940-1949. Arkansas has been blessed with excellent newspaper files on microfilm. However, using them often entails a trip to the Arkansas History Commission in Little Rock, or, if you are lucky, to some local library. Indexes such as these make the files much more readily available. Each entry contains deceased last, first and middle name, if given, as well as comments, such as veteran’s status, age, death and often birth date. (RPB)

In the Footsteps of the Blue and Gray: A Civil War research Handbook, by Brian A. Brown, soft cover, 257 pages, $24.95. (Just the right size to take on research trips) Order from Two Trails Genealogy Shop, Carolyn M. Bartels, 7295 Houston St., Shawnee Mission, KS 66227. Mr. Brown, a Little Rock attorney and Civil War enthusiast, has produced a major new work designed to help genealogical and historical researchers locate records relating to Union and Confederate soldiers during and after the Civil War and also help them understand their significance. It contains an encyclopedia of useful information on this one of the most important 19th Century events in American History. Chapters include “How To Identify Your Civil War Ancestor”; “What Did Your Ancestor Do”; and many, many more. Especially useful is a full discussion of the basic military organization of each army, complete with definitions of such mysterious terms as “company”, “regiment”, etc. He also unravels the puzzle of Civil War military ranks and insignias. The author follows this with an extremely useful state by state discussion of Civil War sources (Union and Confederate) available for research. The sections dealing with Arkansas are excellent. This book ends with a set of current addresses, but not telephone numbers, of institutions holding such records, including state archival agencies, Civil War related National Parks, National Archives Branches, etc., and even a list of Civil War Book dealers. Despite the fact that it is not indexed, it is a must for the book shelf of any one interested in the history or genealogy of this period of American History. (RB)

North Central Oklahoma: Rooted in the Past - Growing for the Future (1965) (2 vols.), hard cover, about 1,000 pages, with a complete name index, $75.25, plus $6.00 postage. Order from the North Central Oklahoma Historical Association, P. O. Box 2811, Ponca City, OK 74602. These two beautifully printed books contains gold mine of information about the history and genealogy of Kay County, OK. This county, located on the Arkansas River northwest of Tulsa, was home first to native Americans, later cowboys, then “Boomers”, and last of all, oil men. The land run of 1883 attracted many settlers from Kansas, Texas, Arkansas, and other places. This history is the story of the communities they found, their businesses, and their churches. It also contains an extensive family history section of some 700 plus pages. All parts are well illustrated, and in an unusual feature for works like this, the history portion is well footnoted. One can tell that a great deal of community pride went into the publication of this work. (RPB)

Obituaries of Washington County, Arkansas, Volume One 1841-1892, compiled by Barbara P. Easley and edited by Barbara P. Easley and Verla P. McAnelly (1996), 466 pages, soft cover, name index. The price is $31.00, plus $4.00 postage; order from Heritage Books, Inc., 1640-E Pointer Ridge Pl., Suite 300, Bowie, MD 20716. One of the richest sources of Arkansas genealogical and local history information are the historic files of our state’s many newspapers. The largest microfilmed collection of these papers is at the Arkansas History Commission and State Archives in Little Rock. Other files can sometimes be found at local college, university and larger public libraries. However, hardly any of these files are available to the general public on inter-library loan. Because of this, the publication of books such as this that contains abstracts or indexes to articles from Arkansas papers is an encouraging new trend. Barbara and Verla, who are sisters, have already published several excellent books containing obituary abstracts from Benton County newspapers. This new work continues this series with the same kind of information for Washington County. It contains a detailed abstract of each obituary and has a full name index. The titles, but not the page and column numbers, of the newspaper sources are listed at the end of each obituary or death notice. Note that there are no newspaper files available for 1842-1853 and 1862-1867. The authors also included information from deaths mentioned in news articles. Besides northwest Arkansas, this work also contains deaths from eastern Oklahoma and elsewhere. [RPB]

The following two books are available from Genealogical Publishing Company, 1001 N. Calvert St., Baltimore, MD 21202-3897:

Genealogy and Local History Books In Print, 5th Edition, Family History Volume (1986), 477 pages, indexed, paperback, edited by Marian Hoffman. The price is $25.00, plus $3.50 postage. This venerable old genealogical finding aid is being republished after a lapse of some 10 years by a new publisher, the Genealogical Publishing Company. This new edition contains a listing of well over 4,000 currently available family histories, pedigrees, biographies, family newsletters, and compiled genealogies. Each work listed is cross referenced to the name and address of its vendor. It also includes a complete surname index of the major families listed in each work. The list of vendors and their addresses can be checked both numerically and alphabetically. For example: item no. 1232 Descendants of Andrew Eby-Abey-Abbee in the Carolinas by Charles Moran Abbee, 1983, price $26.00, is available from Vendor No. G0150, Lancaster Mennonite Historical Society, 2215 Millstream Rd., Lancaster, PA 17601. One disappointing feature in this new edition is the lack of a state index, although many of the works included make mention of states, counties, or towns in their title. Otherwise, this work will make a welcome addition to the bookshelves of serious family historians. [RPB]

Genealogical Research in England’s Public Records Office: A Guide for North Americans by Judith Prowse Reid (1996). 146 pages, hardcover, illustrations, maps, indexes and lists. The price is $22.50, plus $3.50 postage. The Genealogical Publishing Company is known for its excellent research guides. This new work will, no doubt quickly, take its place among its most useful, especially with those who are contemplating a research trip to England or those who just want to do English genealogical research. This "how to" guide begins with an excellent introduction to the Public Records Office (PRO) in London, "one of the richest genealogical repositories in the world", the National Archives of England, with records dating from 1086. Americans used to unlimited access to public archives may be shocked as the author reviews the steps needed to obtain documents at this repository. While there are several books in print that review English genealogical sources, this is the first that your reviewer has seen that meets the needs of those seeking information on immigrants--English and other nationalities--who came to North America. It is well furnished with maps and illustrations, and a very useful list of addresses, including local records offices (archives) across England and Wales. It also has the addresses of North American archives and libraries holding some PRO records, the National Archives in Washington and the Family History Library in Salt Lake City, just to name a few. For those interested in more detailed information, the author has furnished an excellent bibliography. Some of the other topics covered are emigration and immigration records, English census records, "nonconformist" church records, and English vital records.

The work is written in a non-technical style and is easy to read and understand, even for the beginner. Her use of check-lists of things to know before going to the PRO are especially helpful. [RPB]

One Moore Family Tree by Margaret J. Wallace, Drawer R., Mesilla, NM 88046, hard cover, 230 pages, fully indexed, illustrations, photographs, family group sheets, marriage record, family Bible record, obituary records and pedigree charts, etc. $30.00. The author has chosen a simplified format, which is self-explanatory and easy to read and understand. She has used biographical information with pictures and a map to show the location of the area of residence. Included are the known ancestors of Abel Moore, born in Illinois, and descend-and Susan Stewart, married in Dallas County, Texas, on July 25, 1860. Other surnames include Beeman (Beaman), Bell, Boothe, Elliston, Green, Hall, Johnson, Kite, Pemberton, Wright and others. The book closes with a copy of the Everton Publishers of Logan, Utah, Suggestions and Items to Consider in Writing Your Personal History. This would be an excellent book for anyone working on this line of the Moore family. [FYH]

Producing a Quality Family History, by Patricia Law Hatcher, CG. [1996] Ancestry, Inc., PO Box 476, Salt Lake City, UT 84110-0476, softcover, 288 pages, indexed, $15.95, plus $3.50 s/h. This excellent "how to" book emphasizes the need for thorough research of information to be presented in any family history. The author describes explicitly how all facets of the process relate to the finished product.

As detailed, a wide range of considerations is involved in producing a family history. From the obvious - such as organizing the work, writing the narrative, and incorporating photographs and other illustrations - to the less obvious - thoroughly and accurately documenting your research, establishing a visually appealing design, and placing your ancestors in context - this guide covers them all. This reviewer attended the author's class in genealogical writing, editing and publishing at the Genealogical Institute of Texas in Dallas in 1995 which formed the nucleus of this book. Pat knows her subject extremely well and is adept in teaching the skills and techniques to others. If you are contemplating doing a family history, this book is a must! [BJM]

Franklin County, Arkansas Cemeteries North of the Arkansas River by Sue Clark and Virginia McPhail, 1502 North Hills Blvd., Van Buren, AR 72956, [1996] This softcover publication contains 332 pages, and covers all the cemeteries the compilers were able to locate in Franklin County, north of the river. They have also expanded the information by adding data from newspapers, diaries and funeral home records. The compilers have added a map indicating the location of cemeteries in the county as well as directions to, and information concerning, each of them. For instance, in St. Mary's Catholic cemetery, the priest allowed them to copy the Church Burial Records for individuals buried in the cemetery without headstones. This book is to be followed with a later publication listed the same information for the cemeteries south of the Arkansas River. [BJM]

Wills of Franklin County, Arkansas - Ozark and Charleston, 1838-1920 by Virginia McPhail, 1562 North Hills Blvd., Van Buren, AR 72956. Will Book B is the earliest book on file at Ozark, beginning with a few wills recorded in 1865. Wills found in probate papers, but not recorded, are included in alphabetical order, as are several wills found in other books. When a second courthouse opened in 1901 at Charleston, Will Book A begins in 1892 and wills were copied through 1920. Also included are thirty-four unrecorded wills 1838-1918. This volume is an excellent addition to the published genealogical records of Franklin County, AR. [BJM]
