EDITOR’S NOTES

Encouraging genealogists to write about family history is one purpose of the AGS Family History Writing Contest. The second prize winning article from the 2007 contest appears in this issue of The Arkansas Family Historian. “Mt. Olive to Montevideo,” more biography than family history, is the story of a small town Arkansan who became a player in world affairs. Certainly the events described had an impact on his immediate and extended family. This article is an example of how genealogists can put small sketches of their family history in print.

Some newspapers near the end of the 19th century did not print informative obituaries. The Drew County Advance in Monticello, Arkansas, was an exception. Tommy Carter has done a thorough job of abstracting different kinds of notices of death for the years 1895 through 1899 and we present the first part of them here in our second article.

The third article in this issue addresses a Lee family that originated in Virginia and settled in Johnson, now Logan County, Arkansas. The author includes corrections to previously published errors.

Some of the best genealogical information comes from testimonials or personal histories written by people in their own lifetimes. In the case of Martha Hendrix, her brief description of her life and marriage, and specifically her lonely Civil War experiences with her young children gives us all an eye into the past.

We include in this issue a translation of a document written in French and found during the processing of a collection of family papers at the state archives. The document is an 18th century extract of an earlier baptismal record. Despite the possibility of multiple errors resulting from transcription, translation and difficult handwriting, the record provides information about a colonial woman’s birth, parents, marriage, and length of life.

We try not to bring you the same kinds of articles, records, and information in each issue, but this time we have broken our own rule. We were unable to pass up another obituary list, this one more current and from California where many former Arkansans live and die. We are very proud of member Mildred Tatum who has watched for these death notices and taken time to share them with others.

A 1948 voter list from Arkansas Township in Arkansas County provides us with names from a time period not often easy to research. The inclusion of race and school district provides helpful additional information. The number of women registered with their husband’s name speaks to the self-perceived status of women at the time.

Two Ancestry Certificate lineage charts, numerous queries, and several book reviews complete this issue. We hope you will find it helpful and informative.

We would be happy to receive your submissions of interesting family or local history, cemetery surveys, or transcripts, abstracts, or extracts of documents, records or newspaper articles. Remember you may submit as many queries as you want at any time during the year by e-mailing them to Publications@agsgenealogy.org, or mailing them to AGS, P.O. Box 17653, Little Rock, AR 72222.

Applying for AGS Ancestry Certificates will help you organize and analyze your research. The directions for obtaining the application are printed on the page before the back cover of this journal. By printing your ancestry chart in this quarterly, we will help you share and preserve your research information forever. The lineage chart and documentation you provide as proof for the certificate will be deposited at the Arkansas History Commission and filmed. The process is one more way in which you can publish your family history and its documentation in small batches and make it available for future generations.

Don’t forget the deadline for the Family History Writing contest is 30 June 2008. The rules and entry form appear in the back of this journal. Prizes will be awarded at the Arkansas Genealogical Society Fall Conference on 8 November 2008. We look forward to receiving your family history article.

The old assertion that politics makes strange bedfellows\(^1\) certainly received a credibility boost in 1915 when President Woodrow Wilson appointed Robert Emmett Jeffery Jr. Foreign Minister to represent the United States in Montevideo, the capital city of Uruguay. As it happened, these two strangers lived a thousand miles apart—in more ways than one. If Alice had been there at the time, she would have thought that she was back in Wonderland.

At one end stood Woodrow Wilson immaculately dressed in top hat, white tie, and tails—the tall, urbane Virginia aristocrat, sophisticated Princeton graduate, and holder of a PhD from Johns Hopkins University, a former president of Princeton, a previous governor of New Jersey, and now President of the United States. At the other end stood Wilson’s most unlikely ally, Robert Emmett Jeffery Jr., self-made product of a primitive one-room school in rural north Arkansas who never darkened the door of a college, nor ever dreamed of exchanging his blue denim overalls for a formal morning coat and a silk top hat.

The few school terms Robert Jeffery attended never lasted for more than three months at a time as he sat with other kids on cedar logs struggling to master the “three Rs.” \textit{McGuffey’s Readers}\(^2\) comprised the

\(^{1}\) In Williamsburg, Virginia, during the Colonial period, so many people came to the town for “Publick Times” (court) that the normal population of 2,000 would increase to 6,000. Since lodging was in short supply, local inns and taverns would rent bed space on the floor in eight-hour shifts around the clock. The sleepers would lie on the floor in rows, and one never knew in advance who would be his companions in slumber.

\(^{2}\) \textit{McGuffey’s Readers}, first published in 1879 by The American Book Company, was a set of six small books that began with the alphabet and learning words with three letters, and progressed with increasing difficulty to writings from an amazing array of the world’s greatest literature. Some of the writers that Robert E. Jeffery Jr. was exposed to in \textit{McGuffey’s Readers} included William Shakespeare, Samuel Johnson, Charles Dickens, John Ruskin, Sir Walter Scott, the Bible, Thomas Jefferson, Oliver Wendell sum and substance of their school “library” at Mount Olive, a remote village in Izard County, Arkansas. Later, while Mr. Wilson studied law at the prestigious University of Virginia, Robert Jeffery read law from a set of tattered books under the tutelage of a country lawyer in a modest law office in Batesville, Arkansas.

The social, economic, and cultural distance that separated these two men was far greater than the twelve hundred miles from the mountains of Mount Olive to the monuments in Washington, D.C. Despite the immense differences in their lives, however, the President and the young man from the Arkansas hills did share three important attributes. Both of them held fast to their Presbyterian heritage, their impeccable honesty, and their proven competence in public administration.

But the question remains. Why would the President of the United States select Robert Emmett Jeffery Jr., country lawyer and obscure Arkansas circuit court judge, for the mission to Montevideo? The fact is that Wilson wanted Jeffery for the post precisely because of his humble background. To understand how politics propelled these two fellows into their unlikely relationship, you must first know something of Woodrow Wilson’s views about democracy and especially his thinking about Foreign Service officers.

Although Wilson was born into the privileged class, he firmly believed that in a Democratic society opportunities should be open to all regardless of their cultural, social or economic backgrounds. After his election as president, Wilson often ignored the professionals in the State Department and the Foreign Service because he genuinely did not trust them. He thought too many of them were products of exclusive schools and a snobbish society. As Wilson explained:

“We find that those who have been occupying the legations and embassies have been habituated to the point of view which is very different, indeed, from the point of view of the present administration. They have had the material interests of individuals in the United States very much more in mind than the moral and public considerations which it seems to us ought to control. They have been so bred in a different school that we have found, in several instances, that it was difficult for them to comprehend our point of view and purpose.”

Because of his distrust of the Foreign Service professionals, and other government officials in general, President Wilson relied heavily on personal friends he had made in academia for advice and consultation. While in graduate school at Johns Hopkins, Wilson studied with a group of brilliant and earnest students that included Albert Shaw, later editor of the Review of Reviews. Dr. Shaw and Woodrow Wilson had been roommates at Princeton. Dr. Shaw and Edward Mandell House (aka Colonel House) were among a handful of private citizens that shared Wilson’s views on meritocracy, and who influenced many of his decisions throughout his Presidency.

In the larger scheme of today’s world, Uruguay is not a major player. However, in 1915 when World War I began to creep toward American shores, Uruguay was quite important to the interests of the United States. Sandwiched between Brazil to the north and Argentina to the south, Uruguay occupied a strategic commercial and military position. Germany eyed Montevideo with its excellent harbor and world class shipping facilities as a critical asset to service their battle ships and submarines that were operating along South America’s Atlantic coast.

Robert Jeffery’s mission to Montevideo was to intensify U.S. diplomatic efforts as a countermeasure to reduce or eliminate the heavy German influence that gripped Uruguay in those early days of World War I.

4 I have enjoyed the unique privilege of a long friendship with Dr. Albert Shaw’s widow, Virginia Shaw English, my neighbor in Virginia for thirty years. She was a young concert singer in New York when she married Dr. Shaw who was considerably older than she. She became a close friend of Woodrow Wilson’s second wife, Edith Bolling Gault. Edith Bolling Gault was a direct descendant of Pocahontas. Virginia Shaw married Dr. Bruce English after the death of Albert Shaw. She told me once (with much agitation) that Dr. Shaw had warned President Wilson not to go to Europe after the close of the First World War. Dr. Shaw feared that the crafty British and French negotiators would take advantage of Wilson’s lack of diplomatic experience and naïveté as a negotiator in developing the Treaty of Versailles. In retrospect, it appears that Shaw’s fears were well-founded.
Robert Emmett Jeffery Jr. was born into a family of public service officials 30 January 1875 at Mount Olive, Arkansas, to Dr. Robert Emmett Jeffery Sr. and the former Mary Carson.6 He acquired the nickname, Boyse (Boy-zee), at an early age. His family and close friends knew him by that name throughout his life.

Boyse’s grandfather, Miles Jeffery, his great-grandfather, Jehoiada Jeffery, and his great-uncle, Daniel Jeffery, were among the early political leaders in the development of Arkansas. Jehoiada Jeffery served in the House of Representatives in 1842-43. Daniel Jeffery served in the House in 1846-47. Miles Jeffery represented Izard County in the House from 1856 to 1859.Boyse’s father, Dr. Robert E. Jeffery Sr., served as a page in the House during Miles Jeffery’s term. Boyse represented Stone County in the House in 1901-02 and his son, R. E. Jeffery III served as page to the chief clerk during the 1930 session of the House.7

Boyse’s younger brother, Forrest Jeffery, served as Independence County Judge at Batesville in the 1950s. More than a few of Boyse’s cousins and uncles served in other capacities such as sheriffs, justices of the peace, road commissioners, magistrates, etc. in the early days of Izard County.

Boyse Jeffery was admitted to the bar at Mountain View, Arkansas, in 1900 at age twenty-five and was soon elected as representative from Stone County to the Arkansas Legislature. After his legislative term ended, he established a law practice at Newport, Arkansas. While in Newport, he ran successfully for prosecuting attorney in 1906 and served in that capacity until his election as circuit court judge in 1910. Soon, his reputation as a highly competent, fair, and impartial judge marked him as a rising star in the Democratic Party.

Like any good politician, William Oldfield kept an eye on potential opponents back home that might be a threat to unseat him in future elections. Gazing southward toward Newport, Arkansas, he determined that the most serious challenger to his post was Robert Boyse Jeffery, the popular circuit court judge. In 1912, Boyse had just been elected to a second term. Since his growing reputation posed a definite hazard to William Oldfield’s political health, Oldfield needed a strategy to defend his congressional seat from the up and coming political star in Newport.

William Oldfield had been in Congress long enough to know his way around. He had made some friends in high places including President Woodrow Wilson, Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan, President Wilson’s unofficial advisor, Colonel House, and James P. Clarke, Senator from Arkansas.\(^8\)

In designing his strategy, Oldfield contributed further evidence to support the notion that it’s not always your friends that help you get ahead, and it’s not always your enemies that hold you back. Figuring that the best defense is a good offense, Oldfield went to work as a leading supporter of his perceived enemy, Judge Robert E. Jeffery Jr.

To head off the possibility of Boyse’s entrance into a congressional race against him, Oldfield lobbied President Wilson, Secretary of State Bryan, Senator Clarke, and Colonel House seeking an appointment somewhere in the executive branch for his feared future opponent.

Meanwhile, Boyse had expanded his circle of political allies that included his friend, Senator James P. Clarke, a powerful political figure in Washington. Along the way, Boyse came to rely on Mr. Clarke for advice and political contacts at higher levels of government. Clarke had served in both houses of the Arkansas Legislature, first as a Representative in the House in 1887-88, and then in the Senate from 1889 to 1892. He was elected as the nineteenth Attorney General in Arkansas in 1892 and Governor in 1894.\(^9\)

Later, Clark was elected United States Senator in 1903, and twice (1913-1915) as U.S. Senate President Pro Tem. He served on the powerful foreign relations committee and the commerce committee in 1915. Moreover, since he and Woodrow Wilson were both students together at the University of Virginia Law School in 1878-79, Clarke was well-positioned to recommend his friend and fellow Arkansan, Boyse, for the post in Uruguay.\(^10\) \(^9\) Hinshaw, Call the Roll, 198.

While William Oldfield was busy implementing his clever political plot that included Wilson, Bryan, Shaw, Clarke, House, and Jeffery, the need for the mission to Montevideo surfaced. Due to the cunning defensive work of Oldfield in protecting his turf and the offensive maneuvering of James P. Clarke, the name Robert Emmett Jeffery Jr. became known to President Wilson and William Jennings Bryan.

Upon further investigation into Boyse’s background, the President and his Secretary of State knew that they had their man for the Uruguay legation. He represented the ideal candidate they were looking for—an individual unspoiled by exclusive schools and a snobbish society, an honest Arkansas judge far removed from the Eastern establishment, not an aristocrat or an apple polishing imitator of the wealthy classes.11

Heeding the advice of his political mentor, James P. Clarke, Boyse agreed that the exciting opportunity to serve the United States in a foreign embassy was too appealing to turn down. His official appointment by President Wilson came 3 February 1915, with the lofty title of Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary.

By this time, Boyse was in his fortieth year. He had become so immersed in his public service career that he had neglected certain other important aspects of life—namely marriage and a family of his own. Uruguay was too far from home to be alone. Feeling a sense of urgency, he decided to take immediate steps to rectify the situation.

So—at age forty, exactly one month after his appointment, Boyse took for his bride a young woman half his age, twenty-one year old Nita Hoos, 17 March 1915, at the Jefferson Hotel in St. Louis, Missouri. Nita Hoos, a native of Heber Springs, Arkansas, was born 11 October 1894. Well now—if it appears that Boyse was robbing the cradle, he came by it naturally. His father, Dr. Robert E. Jeffery Sr., married a third time, 25 January 1891, at age forty-eight to sixteen-year-old Effie Hopper from Stone County, Arkansas.12

Shortly after their wedding, Boyse and Nita traveled by steamer to South America to begin their exciting new life together in a new and unfamiliar country.13 Boyse’s new appointment brought winners all around. William Oldfield could relax now. He had successfully saved his House of Representatives seat from Boyse’s grasp. And the newlyweds were thrilled at the prospect of a paid honeymoon to an exotic land courtesy of Uncle Sam.

Boyse’s signal accomplishment in Uruguay was his success in rallying that nation to support the United States during World War I. He worked hard with the Uruguayan government to deny the German navy the use of Montevideo’s port—one of the major ports in South America. By December 1917, two years after Boyse had arrived in Montevideo, Uruguay severed diplomatic relations with the German government.14

Of a total of 48 foreign ministers from the United States that have served in Uruguay, Robert Emmett Jeffery Jr. became the eighteenth to occupy the post. Almost all of the foreign ministers from the U.S. to Uruguay were career Foreign Service officers. He was one of only six non-career appointees ever to occupy the embassy at Montevideo, and his six years of service comprised the second longest term as Foreign Minister there. His mission to Montevideo was terminated 9 March 1921 after having served President Wilson’s administration at the most critical time in U.S.-Uruguay relations during all of the First World War.15

Foreign Minister and Mrs. Jeffery had two sons, Robert III and Jerry. Robert III was born 13 August 1917 at Heber Springs, Arkansas. He graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy with the Class of Nineteen

He married Hannah McIntyre at Seattle, Washington, 18 May 1942. Hannah was the daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Henry McIntyre of Honolulu, Hawaii, and Randolph, Vermont.\(^\text{17}\)

Jerry Henry Jeffery was born at Montevideo, Uruguay, 15 March 1919. He served in the U.S. Army Air Corps as a bomber pilot in World War II. Because of his birthplace at Montevideo, Jerry never received a birth certificate. He had to use his father’s passport as proof of citizenship that was required of Army applicants. The diplomatic passport was signed by Woodrow Wilson, President, and William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State. Jerry married Dorcas Harrison in 1940 at Tuckerman, Arkansas. They now live in Newport, Arkansas.\(^\text{18}\)

Judge Robert Jeffery strongly believed in the value of education and traveled frequently to backwoods schools in north Arkansas to encourage young people to study hard. My father once told me long ago about an unforgettable analogy that Judge Jeffery used in a talk at his school. Boyse was stressing the point that kids needed to apply themselves while young because that was when the brain was soft and malleable. As Judge Jeffery explained, “You see, when you are young your brain is soft like butter and can absorb information and ideas. However, as you grow older, your brain becomes hard like an onion and information and new ideas just bounce off.”

The issues that Boyse faced during his career ranged from the most trivial complaints by local constituents to sensitive negotiations with foreign governments. He gave his full attention to all of them. While Circuit Judge in the hills of north Arkansas he was presented one day with a written statement by the editor of a Mountain View newspaper, S. A. McCullough,\(^\text{19}\) that the local sheriff of Stone County, S. T. Cypert, failed to uphold the law by ignoring games of chance operated at a carnival passing through town. said to him, “Well, I don’t know. Anyway, let the boys alone (Stone County boys). Let them learn something.”

The outcome of this weighty matter between good and evil has been lost in the mists of time. But I suspect that Judge Jeffery agreed with Sheriff Cypert about educating the local boys in games of chance.

John Quincy Wolf Sr. tells of a trial in Stone County, Arkansas, when Boyse was a prosecuting attorney. A young man was being tried for disturbing public worship in a Baptist church at Red Stripe, Arkansas. The key witness for the prosecution was an old lady who testified that she had seen the defendant acting giddily and staggering down the aisle to the center of the house where he laughed and talked to those around him. She had been greatly disturbed by his conduct and allowed as how others in the congregation had also been disturbed.

The defense attorney attempted to destroy the old lady’s testimony with a well-planned cross-examination. He went on to explain to the judge and jury that it is only human nature to see in others what we are looking for. If we look for faults we can usually find them. Although he believed the witness to be a good woman—a splendid woman—it is only natural for a young man to cut up now and then. Instead of paying attention to the sermon, she was watching the boy. If she had been listening, singing, and praying instead of watching she would not have been disturbed.

The whole courtroom sensed that the boy was going to go scot-free with this sharp defense. But then Prosecuting Attorney Jeffery took the floor and his rejoinder was brief:

“The defense counsel has not dared to question a single statement that this good woman has made. Instead, he has tried to break down her testimony by telling you and this jury of sensible, God-fearing men that she did too much watching and that she should have been praying instead of watching. When did it become a crime for Christian people to watch? We can’t be too watchful in seeing that the worship of God is given full respect. Ah, gentlemen of the jury, that Good Book that we all love, that is dearer to us than life itself, says to you and me and to all of us, ‘Watch and Pray’. That’s the word of God, gentlemen: ‘watch’ as well as pray.”

John Q. Wolf turned to his friend, Dennis Dozier, and whispered, “Jeffery’s got him—he’s guilty—it’s all over.” And it was. The jury took about five minutes to concur with Boyse’s irrefutable logic by finding the defendant guilty.

Boyse Jeffery suffered a stroke at age fifty and died ten years later, 19 May 1935, at the relatively young age of sixty in Newport, Arkansas. He is buried in Oaklawn Cemetery at Batesville, Arkansas. His widow, Nita Hoos Jeffery remarried 17 May 1943 to Rex Brown and continued to live in Newport.

Someone once said, “It’s not where you get to—it’s where you started from.” It is approximately 7,000 miles from Boyse’s primitive one room school in the backwoods of Mount Olive, Arkansas, to the stylish American Embassy in Montevideo, Uruguay. That calculation, of course, is only in geographical terms. In terms of McGuffey’s Readers and Sears & Roebuck overalls to chic menus in Spanish and elegant black-tie dinners at an American Embassy—the distance becomes far greater.
Boyse’s appointment to Uruguay as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary clearly demonstrates the notion that politics do, indeed, make strange bedfellows.

THE WILLIAM AND DICEY ENNIS LEE FAMILY OF
LOGAN COUNTY, ARKANSAS

Bill Hanks

Many Logan County people are descended from my third great-grandparents William Lee and Dicey Ennis. I descend from them through my maternal grandmother Elsie Coleman White (Mrs. A. B.). When I was ten years old my grandmother was sixty-two years old. She had been reared by her paternal grandmother and an uncle. She was a very intelligent lady with an excellent memory, so while she had no family history on paper, she had a great deal of it in her head. She talked extensively about her family and told me many things that she made very interesting for me.

Elsie was a daughter of William Samuel Coleman and Dicey Elizabeth Lee. Dicey Elizabeth was a daughter of Lovett Lee and Amanda James. Lovett Lee was a son of William Lee and Dicey Ennis. In 1858 in Johnson County, Arkansas, William and Dicey Lee executed a deed in which they sold to her brother her share of her father Redmon Ennis’ land in Cumberland County, North Carolina.¹

In 1979 I corresponded with a Lee descendant named Dr. Luby F. Royall who had spent forty years researching the records of Johnston County, North Carolina, for documentary evidence of the Lee family. He was familiar with their land records and was able to tell me how my William Lee fit into the family. His work is unpublished but deposited at the library in Smithfield, North Carolina.

According to Dr. Luby’s studies, William Lee (1793-1863), the husband of Dicey Ennis, was from Johnston County, North Carolina, and was the son of Lemuel Lee (1753-1841) and his wife whose maiden name was Rains. Lemuel was the son of Edward Lee, whose will was proved in 1775. Edward Lee was the son of John Lee, Esq., whose will was proved in 1768.²

² Dr. Luby F. Royall Jr., The Lees of Johnston County, bound but unpublished manuscript, Public Library of Johnston County and Smithfield, Smithfield, North Carolina; another copy is held by the Johnston County Heritage Center in Smithfield.
John Lee, Esquire, was living in Nansemond County [now Suffolk], Virginia, in 1728 when the line was run between Virginia and North Carolina, splitting his plantation between the two colonies. He sold his land about 1740 and moved to Craven County, North Carolina, settling in the part which became Johnston County in 1746. He received land grants on Mill Creek that were passed on to his children by deed and will. John Lee’s will names his wife Mary. Their children were Robert Lee who married Elizabeth; Edward Lee who married Mary [our ancestor]; John Lee, Jr., who married Elizabeth [Cader Lee (1771-1855) of Johnston County, Arkansas, was son of this couple]; Thomas Lee who married Mary; Fredrick Lee who married Susannah; Elizabeth Lee who married an Ingram; Mary Lee who married a Ballinger; and Sabra Lee who married a Green.³

John Lee’s son Edward Lee and his wife Mary had ten children: William, Lemuel [our ancestor], John, James, Stephen, Jeremiah, Edward, Ann, Edith, and Tabitha.

Lemuel Lee and his wife, née Rains, had seven children: Henry Lee who married Sallie Coats; John Lee; Kader Lee who married Pheraby Lee, daughter of Peter Lee of Sampson County, North Carolina; William Lee who married Dicey Ennis; Jerry Lee who married Sarah Murphey; Alfred Rains Lee who married Sally West; and Thomas Lee who died young. Of these children, John, William, and Jerry lived in Clark Township, Johnson (now Logan) County, Arkansas.

In the 1850s Alfred Rains Lee moved to Missouri. His son Dr. Elbert Johnson Lee of St. Louis, born about 1844, wrote the following family record for his sons:

Lemuel Lee was my grandfather, of the Virginia Lees, a close relative of Light Horse Harry Lee; his wife was of a noted family, her maiden name was Rains. My father’s brothers were William, Jerry, Henry, John, Kader, and Thomas. Thomas died when a young man. My father’s brothers, all but Kader and Henry, went west in an early day, I think in the eighteen forties, some of them earlier. They settled in Johnson County, Arkansas, about fifty miles from Little Rock. Sidney Smith Lee, a brother of Gen. Robert E. Lee, has visited at our home since I can remember. My grandfather was a wealthy slave owner, and had a many quarter planted. My uncles were well to do and took Negroes with them to Arkansas. This I learned from my father and mother.

Lemuel Lee was born 5 March 1753 and served in the Revolutionary War in North Carolina. He applied for a pension 10 September 1834, saying he enlisted in 1776 as a private in John Whitley’s Company, Light Horse or State Troops, stationed in Dobbs County, North Carolina. He took part in a skirmish with the British at Trent River and served until peace was declared. He said that John Lee Sr. and Dixon Fail had served in the same unit with him. He stated that he had never lived over eight or ten miles from where he was born. The pension application includes affidavits from the Baptist Rev. Jesse Adams and William Bryan of Johnston County, North Carolina.4

Lemuel’s son William and his wife Dicey were living in Hardeman County, Tennessee, in 1830.5 Their household contained two males under five, two males age five to under ten, one male age thirty to under forty, three females under five, one female age five to under ten, and one female age thirty to under forty. During the following decade the family migrated to Arkansas and by 1840 resided in Spadra Township of Johnson County, Arkansas.6 In 1850, only Daniel R. Lee remained in Spadra Township,7 while William Lee and his other children were living close together south of the Arkansas River in Clark Township, which is now in Logan County.8

William and Dicey Lee’s known children were: Daniel R., (1820-1895); Britton (1822-1895); Tranquilla (abt. 1824-abt. 1853), wife of Daniel Smith; Lovett (1824-1864); Winaford (1825-1891), wife of James Cravens; Elizabeth (1827-1917), wife of Ephraim Copeland; Mary (1830-1866), wife of John A. Johnson; William I. (1832-1859); John C., born 1835, died before 1866; and James Henry (1836-1915). The first five children were born in North Carolina; the next four in Tennessee; and the last in Mississippi. The family history published in the Goodspeed Biographical and Historical Memoirs of Western Arkansas puts the number of William and Dicey’s children at eleven. It is possible they had a son named Samuel H. who died at a young age in the 1830s. This would account for the additional male child aged under five in their 1830 household.

Unfortunately two errors have been published about this Lee family and it is my desire to correct them here. One error indicates that William and Dicey’s son William I. Lee married more than two years after he had died. There is a marriage record of a William Lee to a Lucy Titsworth on 19 September 1861 in Franklin County. But that William Lee was not the son of William and Dicey Ennis Lee. Their son William I. Lee died 26 March 1859. His wife had preceded him in death by a few months. At the time of the 1860 census William I. Lee’s son Thomas L. Lee was residing in the household of his grandparents William and Dicey Lee.

Another published error names Susan Thompson, wife of Nicholas Thompson, as a daughter of William and Dicey Ennis Lee. While Susan’s maiden name was Lee, she was not a daughter of William and Dicey. Perhaps that misunderstanding arose because Mrs. Thompson’s daughter married a son of Daniel and Tranquilla Lee Smith, thus giving Mrs. Thompson grandchildren who were also grandchildren of William and Dicey.

Anyone interested in this family and their descendants may contact me at 1217 W. 3rd St., Little Rock, AR 72201-1903. I am trying to find a photograph of William and Dicey Lee and their son Lovett Lee.

MARTHA HENDRIX OF MONTGOMERY AND POLK COUNTIES, ARKANSAS

PRIVATIONS OF A SOLDIER’S WIDOW

By Mrs. M. M. Hendrix, of Big Fork

Transcribed and submitted by Carolyn Earle Billingsley, Ph.D.

My husband Benjamin Franklin Hendrix entered the Southern army in the beginning of the war, joining Captain Edwin’s company, Fourth Arkansas infantry, in June, 1861. He was killed in battle December 15, 1863, leaving me with four little children, to live the hard life of many a Confederate widow. My oldest child, George Washington, was seven years old; the next, Samuel Enoch, was five; the third was Benjamin Franklin, three years old, and the youngest, Sarah Elizabeth, was only ten months old.

I felt all these things the more because I was an adopted citizen of Arkansas. My native home was in Pickens county, South Carolina, where I was born October 17, 1832. My parents moved to Cherokee county, Ga., when I was about one year old. At the age of 12, I came with my parents to Montgomery county, Arkansas, and September 4, 1852, married Benjamin F. Hendrix, who was the same age as myself, 22 years.

FEDERAL RAIDERS TOOK EVERYTHING.

With four little ones to provide for, I found life a hard problem. Many times when night came and I lay down, I could not sleep on account of my destitute condition, and being forced to see my children suffer from cold and hunger without power or prospect of helping them. I could have managed to live fairly well, as I could work in the field and chop wood and I had some provisions laid by and the house was comfortably furnished, but federal soldiers came and robbed me of everything, not leaving a mouthful at times for myself and little ones.

They were frequently brutal and once when I seemed slow about cooking something for them, they began cursing and pointed a gun at me, so that I was terribly frightened. But God was good to me in keeping me in a Christian spirit, and I succeeded in raising all my children. My son, G. W. Hendrix, lives at Black Springs, Ark.; Samuel E. Hendrix, lives at Ultimathule, Ark.; B. F. Hendrix lives at Maxwell, I. T., and my daughter, Sarah Elizabeth, lives at Big Fork, Ark., and is happily married to Mr. Liles.

Some notes on Benjamin F. and Martha M. Hendrix/Hendricks Researched by Carolyn Earle Billingsley.

Hendricks is indexed in Ancestry as “Fendricks.” Head of household Samuel (born S.C.) with (probably) his wife Abigail (born Tennessee); six children including Benj. F., age 19, born in Alabama.

Ancestry.com, Source Citation: Year: 1860; Census Place: Caddo Township, Montgomery County, Arkansas; Roll: M653_46; Page: 882; Image: 358, Dwelling 260, 12 July 1860. Benj. Hendrix, age 28, born S.C.; Martha, age 27, born Georgia [sic]; George W., age 5, born Arkansas; and Samuel, age 2, born Arkansas. Benjamin had no real estate value; his personal estate was valued at $1000.

Big Fork was a post office in Montgomery County, established in 1854, but in 1860 was located in Pope County. It was named for Big Fork Creek. Source: Russell Pierce Baker, From Memdag to Norsk: A Historical Directory of Arkansas Post Offices: 1832–1971 (Hot Springs, Ark.: Arkansas Genealogical Society, 1988), p. 20.

A cursory search of the index at Ancestry.com did not find this family in 1870. It’s possible that Martha M. Hendrix had remarried by this time and perhaps the family was listed under the name of the new husband.
On the other hand, the 1870 census is notorious for missing families and for misspellings of names. A more thorough search might yield results.

According to Desmond Walls Allen, Index to Arkansas Confederate Pension Applications (Conway, Ark.: Arkansas Research, 1991), p. 146: Martha Hendricks, widow of B. F. Hendricks (who served in the 4th Arkansas Volunteers), applied for a Confederate pension in Polk County in 1892, stating her husband died in 1863. But there is also listed a Mrs. M. M. Hendrix, widow of B. F. Hendrix (who served in the 4th Arkansas Infantry, Capt. Irven’s [sic] Company), who applied for a pension in Polk County in 1902, stating her husband died 15 December 1863. It’s likely that both of these applications are from the same woman at different times. (The Arkansas History Commission has these applications and will provide a copy of the full application for a fee.)

THE BAPTISMAL RECORD OF MARIE LOUISE JARDELA
Translated by Susan Boyle

The following extract is part of the Refeld Collection at the Arkansas History Commission and State Archives.¹ It is on a small (5 X 7) sheet of very old, but good quality, paper, slightly yellowing, written all in French and all in the same hand, with a note of conclusion at the bottom of the main page. On the reverse side are two notes: one, descriptive, is written vertically and the other, a disclaimer, is written across the top. While this is a translation, an effort has been made not only to maintain the meaning of the original, but also to adhere to the physical placement of the lines and words. However, the very small handwriting on the original has prevented us from maintaining the exact placement of words in the longer lines.

Extract of the register of baptisms, marriages and burials made in Arkansas, extracted the year 1793.

The year 1772 the 19 April,
Brother Valentin Capucin, curé of the parish of St. Louis of the illinois undersigned, has baptized with the usual ceremony of the church, Marie-Louise, daughter of Pierre jardela and of Marie Languedoc.

The godfather has been the Sir pierre joseph Favrot, and the godmother has been Marie-louise Landronis, who not trying to write has made her usual mark: mark of the godmother + Here is the signature of joseph Favrot: joseph favrot in order to make the copy conform to the original.

I undersigned missionary priest
in [—] of which I have signed the year 1793.

¹ Refeld Family Papers, Supplement 1, Box 2, Folder 1, Legal Documents, 1793, 1810; Arkansas History Commission and State Archives, Little Rock, Arkansas.
[Note at bottom:] Therefore marie-Louise jardela, widow Larquet is aged a little more than 75 years, since she would not have been baptized more than one year after her birth.

[Back:] vertically up the side, written in the same hand as the front: Extract of baptism of Marie-Louise jardelas, Widow Larquet across the top: Note: that which you have on the bottom of the page is not a note of the person who transcribed this act of baptism conforming to the original which is torn up. [“Torn up” is a literal translation; the writer simply may have meant “destroyed.”]

It is likely that in 1793 when she prepared to marry, Marie Louise Jardela required a copy of her baptismal record containing her parents’ names to determine her degree of consanguinity with the groom. Her baptismal record was made available to the priest who would determine degree of relationship and perform the marriage ceremony. Many years later, about 1847, when Marie Louise was about seventy-five years old, the original extract was used as proof of her age. It is that copy which resides in the Refeld papers. Perhaps Larquet/Jardela researchers will find she was applying for a pension.
AGS member and California resident Mildred Tatum abstracts obituaries of deceased Arkansas natives that appear in her local newspaper and posts them to the AGS List at ags@rootsweb.com. She has given us permission to reprint her abstracts in The Arkansas Family Historian. These are the obituary abstracts that she posted beginning in August 2006 and continuing through 2007. Her work is an example of easy ways family historians can help one another and also make valuable genealogical information accessible for future generations. This title will be indexed by the Allen County Public Library to include in the Periodical Source Index (PERSI), making this article and these obituaries available and accessible for years to come. Furthermore, every name found below is indexed in this volume. We hope you find one of your long-lost relatives here.

ANSWER from Russell Baker: During the period of 1895/1896 the Arkansas State prison was located exactly where the State Capital building is now located in Little Rock. When prisoners died, unless the family reclaimed the body, they were buried in unmarked graves within the prison grounds. The location of this graveyard is now long lost. The Arkansas History Commission has a few records of prisoners on microfilm. However, almost no indexes are available for them. Sometimes the deaths of prisoners – especially if they were noteworthy – were noted in the Little Rock Arkansas Gazette. Sometimes the hometown newspaper of a prisoner will note his death.

The foremost teacher of advanced genealogical methods and principles based on careful gathering of information, citation of sources, and analysis of evidence has worked hard to erase the long-perceived gap between the standards required of academic researchers as opposed to the standards required of family researchers. She continues to ask us as family historians to step up and do the right thing with our sources so our conclusions will be thoughtful, correct and valuable.

In this, her long awaited sequel to Evidence! Citation and Analysis for the Family Historian, Elizabeth Shown Mills has produced the ultimate guide, with hundreds of citation examples, but also with careful, concise, specific, thorough restatements of the fundamentals of evidence analysis and citation. Any beginning researcher would benefit from a reading of the first two chapters in this book as a foundation for the education they are going to receive from research experience. Any seasoned researcher would benefit from refreshing and renewing their vows of commitment to judging the reliability of information based on where it came from and the strengths and weaknesses of the source.

The author has devoted separate chapters to the various record sources, such as archives, business and institutions, cemeteries, census, church; local, state and federal governments; and publications from books to broadcasts and the web. Each chapter begins with QuickCheck Models which are examples of the source list entry, first or full reference note, and subsequent or short note for each format in which the researcher may gather information from that source. For instance, the chapter on church records contains models for church books, both named and numbered and held by the church or archived off-site; image copies, online or on film; and derivatives, such as a church issued certificate, a re-copied church book, or an online database. Following the models, each chapter proceeds with a text discussion of guidelines and examples. The discussion of church records includes issues like cultural differences, citation elements, formats of original materials, image copies, and derivatives, such as transcripts and databases.

The reader benefits from a detailed table of contents at the beginning of each chapter with each item, nearly each paragraph, numbered. A glossary, bibliography, full index, and a separate index to the QuickCheck models all help to make this the most complete reference for the family historian to use when documenting his sources. The astute reader also will learn much about records in general from the models, examples, and discussions of sources.

This most up-to-date book about researching Canadian family history lists the important websites of the Library and Archives Canada [LAC], FamilySearch, and Ancestry in the introduction. That predicts the focus of the book which assumes research online or at a distance by using films or interlibrary loan. The authors do not emphasize on-site research.

Individual chapters address the LAC, especially use of its website, which includes the Canadian Genealogy Centre; geography, which emphasizes finding localities; immigration; census; vital records – both civil and church; cemeteries; probate records; military records; land records; newspapers; and other ways to find people such as directories or voter lists. Three other chapters treat distinct historic groups – the Aboriginals, Acadians, and Loyalists. In each case, a concise but thorough description or history is followed by genealogical use of records, locating the records, research considerations, alternative sources, websites, and in most cases, a bibliography, and physical or postal addresses. Maps, charts, illustrations and examples aid understanding.

The last ten chapters address research in each individual province and the northern territories. The unique aspects of the history and records of each province are presented and maps, websites, bibliography, and addresses are included.

Four appendices and a comprehensive index complete the book. Research Fundamentals includes concise suggestions on being prepared for research, getting organized, documenting sources, the nature of sources and evidence, analysis, acquiring experience, and working toward goals. Hazards discusses pitfalls caused by names, places and boundaries, dates, sources, and lack of high work standards. The Internet presents the fundamentals of using browsers, search engines, and gateway sites, plus FamilySearch and Ancestry. Canadian History consists of timelines for Canada, Canadian records, Britain, France, and the United States.

This book is well-written and easy to read. The format allows quick reference to a chapter or two for a specific purpose. For those of you with Canadian research, this book is inexpensive, helpful for beginners, and current with the latest website addresses, archives lists, and resources for all researchers.

Researched, written, and published by sisters-in-law in Arkansas, this book provides brief histories of the ancestral families of Mrs. Adelle Ashford’s grandsons. A separate chapter is devoted to the Wheat family and to each of the allied families of Graham, Walker, Watts, Byrd, Cherry, Batchelor, Biggs, Warlick, Jernigan, Petty, Moore, and Ward. Most of the families migrated to Ashley County, Arkansas, and some spread into Hot Spring and Grant counties. The Graham, Watts, and Biggs families married into one of the other allied families in Mississippi or North Carolina.

The table of contents lists each family by chapter and page numbers and lists the states each family resided in. The first two pages in the book list the persons in the direct lines in each family plus each person’s spouse. Numbers designate generations and number of birth in the family, such as 2-1, for the second generation, first born.

While possible names for two earlier generations are provided, the earliest known Wheat was William B. who was born in Tennessee in 1826; resident in Holmes County, Mississippi, in 1850; and died in Ashley County, Arkansas, in 1873. His wife was Kitturah Graham, 1830 to 1860-66. Their son James M. Wheat, 1850-1934, married Lodusky Walker, 1855-1931, whose mother was Jane Watts, 1818-1882. In the third generation, Monroe L. Wheat, 1874-1959, married Sammy Inez Byrd, 1890-1936, whose direct line is followed back to about 1700 in North Carolina. Her mother was a Warlick, her grandmother a Batchelor, and her great-grandmother a Cherry. A Biggs married into the Batchelor family in the 17th century, and a Jernigan married into the Warlick family in the 19th century. A Petty who married into the Wheat family in the 20th century had Moore and Ward ancestry in the 19th century.

A significant amount of information is presented on each family, including data from census, deeds, and tax records, some of it transcribed in full. There are numerous good quality photographs, and an appendix contains photocopies of Bible records. A full name index and the underlining of direct ancestors makes the lines easy to find and follow.

Anyone with these surnames in the areas mentioned would do well to look at this book. The review copy has been donated to the Arkansas History Commission.

This handy little book gets bigger with every edition. The focus is on given names, and the original separate lists for female and male nicknames continue here with more nicknames than before.

The second edition added an appendix containing Dutch/Frisian names and their equivalents and a separate appendix of English names with their Dutch/Frisian baptismal equivalents. The third edition added an appendix containing truncated or superscripted names, such as Chas for Charles or Edwd for Edward, and another appendix listing names that were used for males and females, such as Carol and Evelyn. An inspired addition in the fourth edition was Appendix E containing a reprint of Donald Lines Jacobus’ very readable article, “Nicknames in New England” from The American Genealogist, vol. 45 (April 1959): 78-81, a discussion of the probable origin of many common nicknames.

This new fifth edition adds Appendix F, a list of Italian names, nicknames, and diminutives with their English equivalents. In her introduction, the author recounts her own research blocks caused by not recognizing a nickname. This reviewer recalls an early 19th century marriage record in her own direct line which recorded Nancy for the bride and the husband’s deed of sale thirty years later recording the waiver of dower rights by wife Anna. Every family historian should have this inexpensive book at hand to aid analysis of evidence and avoid a temporary brick wall.

This book will help anyone researching an adoption event, because it introduces a different perspective while recounting the process the authors followed to identify and locate Beth Sherrill’s birth mother and father. Unlike other books dealing with adoption research which list methods, techniques, kinds of records, and explanations of law, this one begins with a more philosophical approach and discusses the emotions that come into play and the different points of view of the people involved. Part of the book is devoted to advising searchers, whether adoptees, birth parents, or adoptive parents, to set aside traditional attitudes and restraints imposed by the adoption system and to dispense with blame as it is counterproductive. The authors address why the members of the adoption triangle search for each other, such as a desire for knowledge, confirmation, or medical history, and then offer advice to each of the three individually.

In addressing the search process, the authors stress knowing the law; recognizing the difference between public and private adoptions; using registries, internet services, and lists; and recognizing the importance of the location of the birth as the one thing the birth parent and the child have in common. They emphasize the importance of obtaining a copy of the file that contains the non-identifying information, because, while it lacks names, it does provide physical descriptions, ages, educational background, and multi-generational clues that will be helpful in forming a profile. They advise against debating the issue of closed records as non-productive and point out that businesslike, polite, and subdued behavior is usually repaid with help and information. They suggest thorough questioning and searching in the locality of birth, including the hospital, the local newspapers, and the courthouse, as well as the placing of advertisements and the use of school yearbooks. The authors also offer advice concerning when and why it is appropriate to consult an attorney and suggest seeking a court order to unseal a record as a last resort. The story of Ms. Sherrill’s success in locating her birth mother is heartening and provides a helpful lesson to others.

Certificate of Arkansas Ancestry

From the Arkansas Genealogical Society, P. O. Box 17653, Little Rock, AR 72222

Do you have ancestors who would qualify for ancestry in Arkansas? AGS has certificates in four different categories of residency. In which category does your ancestor belong? It requires a little research to acquire a certificate giving recognition to your family’s pioneers and settlers of Arkansas. The categories are:

Colonial
This certificate is for an ancestor who resided in Arkansas prior to January 1, 1804.

Territorial
This certificate is for an ancestor who resided in Arkansas prior to June 15, 1836.

Antebellum
This certificate is for an ancestor who resided in Arkansas prior to May 6, 1861.

Nineteenth Century
This certificate is for an ancestor who resided in Arkansas prior to December 31, 1900.

To prove ancestry in Arkansas, a lineage of the direct ancestor must be submitted to AGS, along with source documents to prove these facts. A family group sheet of the ancestor who resided in Arkansas must be completed with primary sources as proof. All sources must be cited, photocopied and submitted with the application. The citation must be easily searched for verification. Examples of acceptable documents include: census records, church or bible records, tax lists, court records, military records, land patents, deeds, newspaper items, etc. Send copies, not originals, since they will not be returned. Periodically, the applications are filmed by the Arkansas History Commission and State Archives, where they may be accessed through the Biographical Index.

It costs only $10 to apply for an Arkansas Ancestry Certificate. To receive an application write to Tommy Carter, 10106 Sulphur Springs Rd., Pine Bluff, AR 71603 and send your name and address with $1.00 for postage or print it from the website at www.agsgenealogy.org. Complete the application form and return it with $10.
